

Re-Framing Quality Public Education as a Fundamental Human Right

By Annie Kidder

"Education is a fundamental human right, and the right of all people to learn. It is the foundation of a just and democratic society. It is the key to economic growth and social development. It is the path to a better future for all." — United Nations Declaration on the Rights of the Child, 1959

Education is a fundamental human right, and the right of all people to learn. It is the foundation of a just and democratic society. It is the key to economic growth and social development. It is the path to a better future for all. (United Nations Declaration on the Rights of the Child, 1959)

Education is a fundamental human right, and the right of all people to learn. It is the foundation of a just and democratic society. It is the key to economic growth and social development. It is the path to a better future for all. (United Nations Declaration on the Rights of the Child, 1959)

Education is a fundamental human right, and the right of all people to learn. It is the foundation of a just and democratic society. It is the key to economic growth and social development. It is the path to a better future for all. (United Nations Declaration on the Rights of the Child, 1959)

